DubCorp Inc. Announces VectorTees.com; An Online Custom Garment Printing Business Serving Internet Savvy Mid-Large Sized Businesses.

San Luis Obispo, California, October 30, 2006 - Internet savvy businesses are buying more and more goods online; saving time and money in the process. Now, with the advent of VectorTees.com, they can order custom printed t-shirts and other garments in less than 5 minutes from the comfort of the office. VectorTees.com uses a custom software application designed to simplify and streamline the multi-step process usually associated with printing custom garments for business.

VectorTees.com is being launched by DubCorp Inc. as the latest in their growing list of clothing related E-commerce sites. The site eliminates the usually tedious step of preparing an artwork file for printing. "The biggest bottle neck in printing is getting good art, but most tech savvy businesses these days already have their art in vector format. For these businesses, which are who we are aiming to service, there is a tremendous amount of savings we can offer ", says James Whitaker, owner of DubCorp. For Whitaker, who has owned both a screen printing business as well as an E-Commerce business, the match was obvious. "In a sense, we're qualifying our customers. If you have good artwork and can use our online interface, then you're making our job easier, so we can afford to offer significant savings over a traditional screen printer."

VectorTees.com is a deceptively simple site. Customers simply choose between 5 basic garments ranging from a traditional t-shirt to a hooded sweatshirt. They then choose their color, sizes, and check out. Afterwards they upload their file and their shirts are shipped in 5-7 business days. Minimum orders begin at 144 items. Shipping and a PDF proof are included free with every order.

The US screen printing industry is estimated to be about $14 billion per year, the vast majority of which is B2B.

DubCorp Inc. is a privately held California corporation that specializes in developing unique and creative niche market businesses. GreekHoodies.com is one of several businesses the company is developing for the often over-looked fraternity and sorority market.
